14. Please describe any specific aspects of the course and/or teaching practices that your instructor used that particularly helped you to engage with the material, learn the material, and/or develop your own critical perspectives on the material.

Brought in Industry Specialists that actually related to the project we were working on. Also taught classes in a discussion like manor that helped me learn more.

Detailed walkthroughs with different nn types.

Doing the homework helped a lot and the practice exams were helpful. The videos were also interesting and we were given a free textbook

I enjoyed the amount of pre-lecture content that was available to us, and I also enjoyed the professor's commitment to all of us learning.

I think the pre-lecture videos are pretty helpful. I also think the LLRP of each week help me reflects and review concepts each week.

Professor bought us the statquest material for reading, which was really intuitive and helped me understand the content learned in class.

The 3b1b videos teaching dl concepts before classes were helpful but somewhat lacked a bit of rigorous derivations.

The discussion format of the class, engaged learning.

15. Please describe any specific aspects of the course and/or teaching practices that your instructor used that were less helpful for your learning. Optionally you may offer constructive suggestions that might improve their effectiveness.

I feel like the CBTF exams are not that helpful. I hope we can have some format of cheatsheet which I think is pretty helpful for me to learn new things.

LPRR, I did not read any of the other students' writings, and I doubt any other student read any of the other students' writings either. It just feels like busy work, especially if the questions don't change, and it's also mandatory with 300 words. Most people probably just AI it and move on. True/False questions or even multiple-choice questions are not good; free-response questions are the best way to go about it, in my opinion. I know you said you didn't try to make "trick" questions, but I do think you had a lot of trick questions, at least by normal student standards. It's almost necessary in order to make it challenging enough for T/F questions, but that goes back to the point that they are bad. When it comes to these T/F questions, the students will have to guess specifically what kind of testing style the professor employs, and whether or not they are looking into specific wording details, or they just don't care as much and look for general knowledge. There are too many variables at play and too few dimensions of output. I got a 71% on the first test because I couldn't differentiate your testing style, and got 100% on the retake after I learned it. But that doesn't really reflect my understanding of the material as much anymore; it's more like an understanding of you as a professor instead, which really shouldn't be the goal of this course. It's just my thought.

LPRRs, since there wasn't that much to reflect on every week, I think around 100 words for the first few weeks would suffice.

Nothing really

The only thing that I can think of is that maybe the course could've benefited from a little more math. However, this is a really small thing. The class was very fun and I would like to emphasize its efficacy.

16. Please describe any specific aspects of the course and/or teaching practices that your instructor used that created or interfered with a welcoming learning environment that valued and supported students from all backgrounds and identities.

Everything!

I think the zoom meeting and class discussion part. However, I think it is better for us to join the meeting on our own instead of sitting in the classroom because it is difficult to concentrate because the sounds are blurry and noisy, also people may be shy in sharing ideas within in the classroom.

nothing in specific, but the environment was certainly inclusive and helpful.

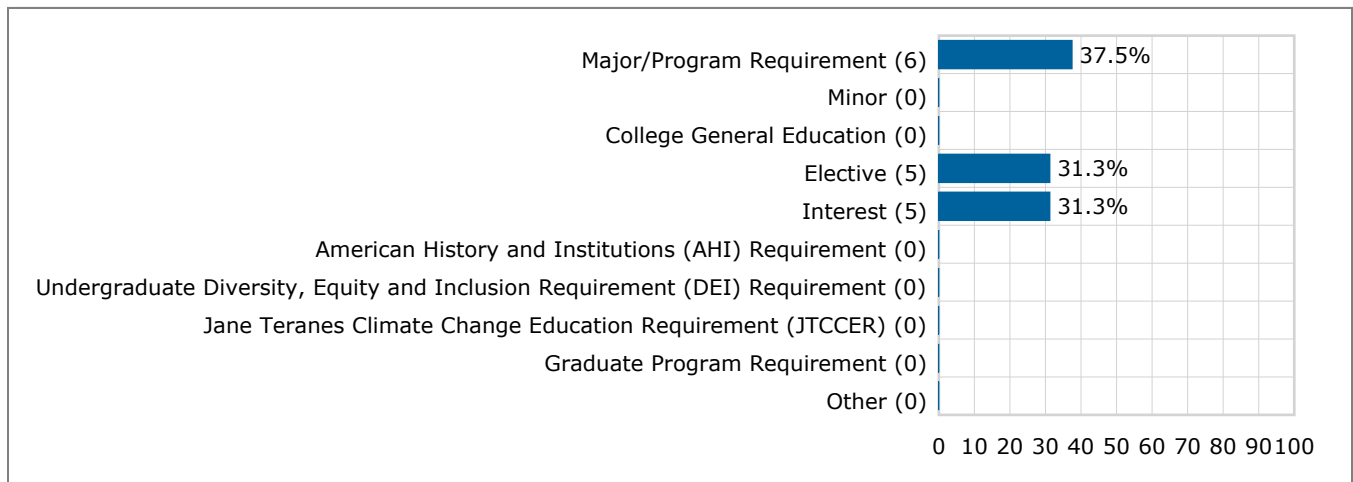

The grading structure of the class

There was always quick feedback on piazza, so there was constant support

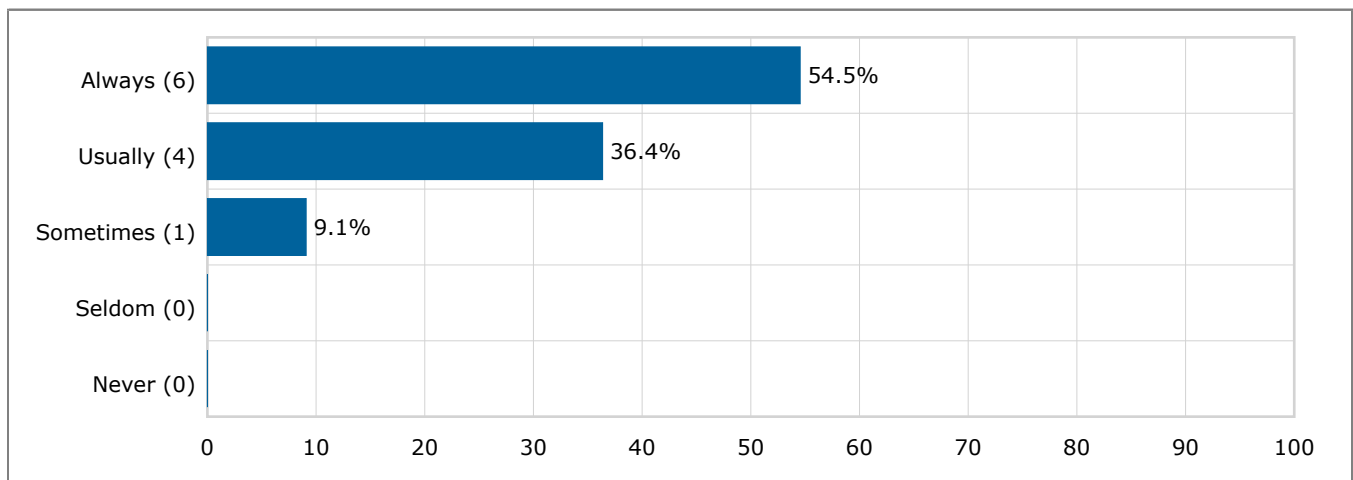

Yes! The professor was one of the best and she was very nice all the time, very accommodating, but fair. Highly recommend.

Student Participation

18. How often did you attend class and/or engage with course materials?

19. Hours per week of work outside of class

Additional Feedback

21. Is there anything else you would like to share about your experience in the course?

It's hard to judge because it's a summer class. It felt super rushed but that's the nature of it. I think this structure would work well in a regular quarter.

Thank you professor for providing a very awesome space to learn this subject!
